Modern Woodmen Initiate 12 New Members.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Khmer left yesterday for Big Spring, for a visit to Mrs. Julia Clarkson. Mr. Kemper has gone on a hunting trip for a few days.

Mrs. Charlie Beard and children were in the city last week the guests of Mrs. Nora Board.

Miss Mabel McElhoolan will leave today for Elizabethtown, where she will spend a week with Miss Hilary Bryan.

Mrs. J. M. Herndon and little son returned Monday from Brandenburg after a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Will Ascher.

Miss Lula Hook, of Hardinsburg, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hook this week.

Edd Monahan, of Glendean, spent Tuesday with C. L. Chamberlain.

Rev. and Mrs. L. K. May have returned home from Webster.

Miss Iva Mudd, of Louisville, and sister, Miss Bessie Mudd, of Bowling Green, were visitors of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Mudd, at Oakland, last week.

Hon. John Allen, of Nashville, Tenn., the representative of the Barley Tobacco Society, spent a few days last week the guest of Mr. C. C. Heron.

Miss Evelyn Herndon expects to leave this week for Louisville to be a member of a house party given by Mr. and Mrs. Virginia Tate.

If you want the best flour buy the Lewisport BEST patent flour.

The Union Thanksgiving Service will be held at the Presbyterian church of which the Rev. E. W. Graves is pastor. The sermon will be preached on Thursday morning by the Rev. T. W. Taylor, of Louisville, pastor of the Baptist church of his city. The musical programme hasn't been definitely announced, but it is expected that it will surpass any they have had for some time.

Call the Irvington meat market, Cum. Phone No. 5-3 for fresh and cured meats quick service and satisfaction guaranteed. M. W. Winn, Manager.

Miss Sue Bandy, who has been the guest of Miss Margaret Peyton, at Hardinsburg since Friday, returned home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Coleman, after a visit in Louisville, has returned home.

Mrs. Hall, of Webster, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Chapin, for a week.

Joe Piggett, who is attending school in Louisville, spent Saturday and Sunday here. Joe is a member of the football team of the Louisville High School and plays tackle. He is considered one of the very best players—this speaks well for an Irvington boy.

The Woodmen will meet at the Public Hall on Wednesday night and will initiate a class of about twelve. This camp is doing good work and they certainly know how to entertain their visiting brothers.

During the week just ended only one of any consequence has happened.

Dr. M. B. Moremen has sold the half interest of the Irvington Pharmacy to Mr. A. O. Marshall of this city. It will still retain its same name and the obliging clerk, Mr. Poin Galloway, will be with us until the first of the year, when Mr. Marshall will take charge of the drug store.

Dr. and Mrs. P. E. Dempster, who have been here for several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Foster Lyons, left last week for Glendean to oversee the completing of their new home there. They hope to have possession of their beautiful home by Christmas.

Mrs. E. R. Turner, after spending several weeks here the guest of Miss Mary Cornwall, left for Louisville Friday.

Masonic Banquet.

The Masons gave a most elaborate banquet last Friday night in their temple, complimentary to a number of men who came from Hawesville to take degrees in masonry.

The entire party went to Brown's where an oyster course was served to the masons and their wives.

REV. DILLON

A Worker--Cleaning up Churches-- Says There are Some Stumps in The Way.

Rev. Mr. Dillon, the new preacher of the Methodist church, is certainly a worker. He has been cleaning up the old stumps around the church and from all indications he is going to clean up inside, if he happens to run across any stumps therein. Rev. Dillon preached a wide awake sermon Sunday night. Those who usually take their evening nap at church opened their eyes and ears wide to what Rev. Dillon had to say. He said there was something wrong in the church, some of the members were not living right or more of the young men would be attending church. Rev. Dillon is an earnest preacher; he believes in making wrong matters right and truly has the interest of each and every person at heart. He and Mrs. Dillon are fast making true friends in Cloverport.

Mr. Brashear Ill.

J. D. Brashear has been suffering during the last week from a severe attack of indigestion. Mrs. Brashear arrived from Louisville Saturday night to be with him.

Rev. B. W. Hardin and father-in-law, D. Denton, spent Sunday night with Jno. Mercer and family.

S. P. Drury was taken suddenly ill Saturday night.

The pastor, Bro. Hardin, announced at the Sunday evening service that he would begin a series of meetings on the first day of December, assisted by Rev. J. Ebb Hughes. Bro. Hughes is a good revivalist and has been successful wherever he has held meetings.

The Young Man's Chance.

The betrayal of the public on the tariff question by the Republican party will mean the defeat of many congressmen and senators. Changes are likely to occur in districts strongly republican such changes occurred in 1890 and 1894.

Now is the time for the young man to enter politics. There ought to be an anti tariff reformer nominated by the Democrats in every district and aspirants for the nomination should begin NOW and earn the nomination by an active canvass. Brass bands are not necessary. Let the young men who have a taste for public life and an interest in the people go out into the country precincts, call the farmers together, read the republican platform and then the Payne-Aldrich bill! Let them read the democratic platform, pointing out the necessity for an income tax and then call attention to the income tax amendment.

The people are sound at heart and honest in purpose. Let the work of education go on and success to the congressional aspirant who wins the nomination by proving his devotion to the public welfare and his ability to deal with the questions now before the country.—The Commoner.

Big Crop of Tobacco

One of the very best tobacco crops grown in Montgomery county this year was weighed up to Mr. Robertson, Tuesday. It was grown by John Pierat, on eight acres of ground near this city and when stripped out weighed 10,110 pounds nearly 2,400 pounds to the acre, and brought 15 cents per pound, an average of $38.31 per acre and making Mr. Pierat the champion tobacco grower.—Mt. Sterling Gazette.

SAME PRICES FOR SAME QUALITY.

Agreement Is Reached By Joint Tobacco Committee--Calls

For $9, $9 And $3

For 1909 Crop.

SAMPLES LIKE LAST YEAR.

The full joint committee of the Green River Tobacco Association, the A. S. E. and the home Warehouse company is now holding its most important sessions in this city. Emison Shaw presided. There were twenty-five members of the three associations present, and much interest was taken in the proceedings. It was agreed that last year's prices, $9, $9 and $3, would be acceptable for the 1909 crop for the same quality of tobacco as brought those prices last year.

The special sales committee was instructed to prepare samples as nearly duplicates of the last year's samples as possible.

On every side it is expected that there will be an offer of $9, $9 and $3 for the same sample as was sold for these prices last year, and that it will be accepted.

Notice

Our supply of ice is exhausted. No more will be made for the present: place your orders direct with Owensboro Ice and Cold Storage Co., or Smith Ice Co., of Owensboro, Ky.

Cloverport Water Light & Ice Co. By A. L. Fort, Vice-Pres.

The Fiddlers' Contest.

There will be an entertainment given by the Home people of Cloverport, Ky., Tuesday, November 23rd, under the auspices of the Breckenridge Lodge No. 61, K. of P.

This will be an Old Time Fiddlers' contest with musical comedy and songs by Clifford & Hartley. We already have several Old Time players who are prepared to assist us and we want others to come in and register their names at either Hamman's or J. C. Nolte & Bros., store.

The capital prize will be ten dollars, and the merchants and business men of the city have contributed liberally, which insures prizes for all taking part. Tickets on sale at the Bank of Cloverport. Admission 35c, 25c, and 15c. Call early and have seats reserved. Breckenridge Lodge No. 61, K. of P., Clifford & Hartley, Promoters and Proprietors.

Carl Lishen Brought Home.

Carl Lishen, who was seriously injured in Louisville week before last, was brought home Thursday night. He was accompanied by his wife and mother. His many friends are delighted to hear of his improvement and that he will be out soon.

Guests Of The Reid's.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McCracken, of Louisville, and Miss Alice McCracken, of Honolulu, were the delightful guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Reid last week.

Gregory's Celery.

Ed. Gregory raises the finest celery that has ever been on the market. It is as white as cotton. Next season he intends to raise several acres of it.

HARDINSBURG

Misses Isabelle Hendricks and Lillian Miller were in Louisville Saturday and Sunday the guests of Miss Annie Hendricks.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. McHenry and John Goodloe, of Louisville, came Saturday night to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Beard for several days.

Senator and Mrs. Gus Brown were in Louisville, Frankfort and Lexington last week.

Rev. Willott will begin a series of meetings at the Baptist church on Monday night after the first Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Walls were in Louisville shopping.

Miss Emma Lou Moorman was in Louisville a few days last week.

Beard's have an unusually attractive show window, displaying a real farm scene with ideal hunting conditions. Everyone stops to admire it and to wish for real birds, squirrels and other game in such abundance. The designer, Geo. Evans, is the recipient of many congratulations upon his work.

If you want the best flour buy the Lewisport BEST patent flour.

Lloyd Cox, will this week move to Elizabethtown.

Miss Tula C. Daniel went to West Point Monday to attend a District Missionary meeting.

Dr. Mather will address the Glendean school next Friday afternoon and preach in the Glendean Baptist church at night.

Supt. Joe W. Trent was busy Thursday checking out the $4,670.30 draft he had received for the second month's payment of teachers. Many other school checks were written last week in payment for full furnishing and repairing, etc. Not until then were the chairmen paid for taking the school census last April. It is expected that the collections will permit the payment of all expenses hereafter as paid as incurred. The teachers, of course, will be paid as rapidly as the State furnishes the money.

Dav. Walls was here from Custer Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. D. S. Richardson, of Union Star, is the guest of Mrs. P. M. Beard.

Miss Maunie DeHaven, of Cloverport, is the guest of Mrs. Will Davall.

Mrs. C. L. Beard was the guest of Mrs. Nora Board, of Irvington, several days last week.

Herbert Beard was in Louisville Sunday.

Miss Louise Moorman, of Glendean, is spending several days with Mrs. D. R. Murray.

At an enthusiastic educational rally held by the colored people here Friday night, a school league of thirty members outside the school was formed. E. W. Beard was elected president and Eva Roberts, secretary. Rev. Harris, the local colored pastor is doing a great work among his people in arousing them educationally. He, with their well-known teachers at Hardinsburg, are benefactors to their race.

Willie Green, of Falls of Rough, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Beard Sunday.

Lucky Boy

Barney Franklin Squires was the lucky boy who found Marion Weatherholt's gate, which had been hidden since Halloween, and received a reward of one dollar. The gate was on the river bank.

GOT NEW

LETTER STYLE?

Name, Street And Number, City And State Now Run Down Envelope in Straight Line Even Business Houses Adopt It.

Do you know the proper way in which to address an envelope?

If you know, do you apply that knowledge, in the form of ink, in your personal and business correspondence? Fashion, which dictates the placing of a napkin on a man's left knee and other weighty details of daily life, has assumed supervision of the manner in which envelopes shall be addressed. Time was when everyone followed the custom of inscribing an envelope as if it were a "drop line" verse. This was the way:

Thomas Brown, Esq.,
1330 Soandso Street,
Chicago,
Ill.

Let us hope you no longer are addicted to that form unless you assume to be superior to the "latest" in styles, including epistolary—for the "very latest" fashion in envelope inscription is like this:

Thomas Brown, Esq.,
1330 Soandso Street,
Chicago,
Ill.

You may not like it at first glance, but then personal likes really have little or nothing to do with fashion. No one really likes those big hats with the extension feathers that literally "cut" the friends, but the big hats are supreme. Just so the "all-in-a-line" style of envelope inscribing is rapidly gaining headway, not only for personal but for business letters.—Chicago Post.

SICK LIST.

Much Illness in Cloverport--Unusual Weather Proves Unhealthful.

Mrs. Jess Weatherholt has been sick for sometime at her home in the West End.

Miss Nannie Collins, who has been ill the last week, is able to be out again.

Mrs. Sam Conrad is quite ill at her home on the West Side.

Mr. Ed. English is no better.

Mrs. Fred Fraize has been suffering dreadfully from ear trouble.

Mrs. Wells is very low at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Geer.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Again The Breckenridge News offers a nice book as a prize for the best Thanksgiving letter written by a boy or girl not over 15 years of age. The writer does not have to be a subscriber to The News, but they must get their letter to the desk by Friday, Nov. 19th. The sooner the better.

Write on one side of the paper; use not more than 100 words.

If possible, write with pen and ink.

Tell what happened during the past year that made you happiest and for which you are most thankful.

Last Thanksgiving the News was delighted to hear from the little writers and hopes to receive letters from many more next week.

The Mean Thing.
"Why are you mad at her?"
"I met her on the car today, and she said, 'Oh, let me pay your fare!' and I said, 'Oh, you mustn't,' and she didn't."
—Houston Post.

The regular white shoe polish is made with whiting and powder, made medium thick and applied with a cloth. This may be used on white canvas and white and colored buckskin shoes. Rub the shoes free from dry powder after they have dried.

"Bootes" made of chamois may be washed in ammonia water.

Wash them in a suds with ammonia in it, rinse in more ammonia and wipe them dry with a towel or cloth. Do not dry near artificial heat.

THE ELECTION CONTEST.

The Democratic candidates met at Hardinsburg last Saturday and by unanimous consent agreed to file contests in the late election in which each of them were defeated by a small majority. The filing of the contest created quite a stir among the Republicans, though they had anticipated such a move on the part of the Democrats, yet they were not quite certain that the contest would be made. Ever since the canvassing board announced the result of the final count the Democrats have talked of contesting. Not until last Saturday however, was a final decision reached. The services of Messrs. Murray & Murray were secured the day after the election, and ever since that time reports of irregularities in the election have come to light and the Democrats basing their faith on these things, feel that they will win in the final outcome. Nine separate petitions were filed, each of which set out clearly the grounds on which the contest is based. The Republican candidates were made defendants and they are required to file their answer in twenty days. The use of money, whiskey and other unlawful methods are charged against the Republicans. While this is a serious charge, and one upon which the law fixes a heavy penalty, it is not the main one on which the Democrats will rely to gain the contest. The counting of two or three hundred illegal and mutilated ballots for the Republican ticket is the most important charge alleged against them. The people will remember that the name of J. C. Brodie, the Republican candidate for circuit clerk, was left off the ballot, and the courts decided that it could not be put on, not having been certified to the clerk in time. This blunder was made by the Republicans, as they freely admitted before the election. But in order to reinstate their fallen brother, and some how fix him up for the Republican voter on election day they gave out instructions that his name should be written on the ballot. This was done with pen and ink in many of the precincts, and thus many hundreds of Republican ballots were thereby mutilated and defaced. Notwithstanding this, they were counted for the Republican ticket and over the protest of Democratic officers of the election. Upon an investigation by the courts, these ballots will be thrown out and that will leave a clear majority of the legal ballots cast to be counted for the Democrats. There is no other key to the situation. It will score a big victory for the Democrats on a final showing case. The Republicans are restless and uneasy over the outcome because it is evident that on a fair count of the ballots, that should be counted legally, the Democrats have won. Besides Messrs. Murray & Murray, the Democrats have secured other legal counsel that will assist in the investigation and the interest in the proceedings is growing throughout the county. Not alone here, but politicians in other parts of the state are anxious to see the final outcome.

How will Jesse Eskridge be able to explain that he is eligible for the office of County Attorney of this county when he has resided in Owensboro, Ky., for the past nine years. The constitution of the State says on the subject: "No one shall be eligible to the office of County Attorney who has not resided in the State two years, and one year next preceding his election in the county and district in which he is a candidate." His explanation will be something like the answer Mike Donohue made to the fellow who asked him to describe a steer he had lost. Well, says Mike, he was a very fine beast with a white spot on his side next to the fence.

It is said that mayor-elect Gaynor, of New York, won his election in that great city without the use of money. Well, George Harris, the Magistrate-elect of the Balltown precinct won his election without money too—and he had to overcome a hundred Republican majority. We call that running sane.

It would be quite a coincidence if the candidacy of J. C. Brodie should result finally in defeating the whole Republican ticket. That's just what will happen when the illegal ballots are thrown out.

About all of the farmers in the Custer section of this county have pledged their tobacco. They raise a good quality of Burley and expect to get $14 for the best.

It is an important fact, to note in passing, that the Republicans in this county have been unusually quiet over their so called victory in the late election.

The Republicans of Grayson county have filed papers at Leitch field contesting the election of the Democrats in that county.

When the election contest is sifted down, the whole thing will depend upon the mutilated ballots.

A. Fallon, living on Railroad St., Cloverport, Ky., says: "I can say that Doan's Kidney Pills live up to the claims made for them. My kidneys and bladder were disordered for twelve years. My back ached severely and when I stooped or lifted, sharp twinges darted through my loins, causing me to suffer intensely. When I first arose in the morning I was lame and sore and the slightest work exhausted me. I was also languid and at times felt very nervous. Headaches and dizzy spells were added to my affliction and too frequent passages of the kidney secretions caused me great annoyance, particularly at night when I was forced to rise from three to six times. I used but one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Fisher's drug store and received almost entire relief. I intend to continue with them and have no doubt but what I will soon be entirely cured."

CHAPTER XIV.
WHEN Mrs. Brooks found herself alone in the street she walked along mechanically. Her heart seemed to be pressed down by a weight, and her breath came painfully through her contracted throat. She could not believe that what she had gone through was real, the thing was so monstrous, so utterly inconceivable. Her husband, Joe, for whose sake she had given up a life of ease, for whom she had borne cheerfully the trials of poverty, in whom she had placed her entire faith, this man, to whom she had yielded herself trustfully, in whom, up to that hour, she had believed as the soul of honor, had stood exposed as a thief and a liar.

To save himself from the impending punishment of his dishonesty he was willing to trade the honor of his wife! To maintain himself in the material ease that his thieving had brought them for a few brief weeks he wanted her to prostitute herself for money—and he had threatened in his efforts to force her to do this thing! And she, driven to desperation, had let him arrange a rendezvous for her with Captain Williams in the late evening! She stopped and leaned against a wall for support. A violent tremor had seized her, and the street lights were whirling about in a daze.

"My God!" she groaned. "What shall I do? What shall I do?"
The fit of faintness passed off, and she was able to collect her thoughts and consider the best course of action. When she had undertaken to call on Captain Williams at that hour it was with no thought of leading herself to her husband's hideous plan. In a vague, hopeless way she had resolved to beg money for him, to see if there was not some manner in which money and restitution could be made. Now she was afraid. If she went to him, how could she approach him—what could she say? What would he think of her coming to his rooms, at night too? He would think, and under the circumstances naturally think, only one thing. And she would be completely in the power of this colossal, this cruel, who so often had leered his unbecoming admiration of her when she was powerless to resist it.

Her impulse was to turn from the cruel and fly from her husband, leaving him to the fate he merited. She could go to her mother's home and await her return from the theater. She would at least find a refuge there. But in the morning world could see her public exposure and disgrace. No; she must make the effort; whatever the cost, whatever the sacrifice.

Ten minutes later she was knocking at Captain Williams' door. The door swung open, and the captain stood before her.

"Come right in, Mrs. Brooks," he invited. "I've been waiting for you."
"I was delayed a little," she said timidly.
"Your husband telephoned that you were coming."
"Yes, I know."
"The news came late, and she stood, knowing not what to say or what to do."
"Did you meet Smith?" he inquired.
"Smith?"
"Your friend Jimmy. He just left."
"No, why?"
"What have passed you in the elevator. It does not matter. Won't you sit down?"

She took the chair he advanced for her close to the table.
"You must excuse the looks of these quarters," he went on. "I am an old bachelor, you know, and my Jap valet ain't allowed to dust up or clean much. Knocks out all my idea of arrangements."
"It is a quaint place," ventured Emma.
"Yes. Lived here ever since I've been in New York. I fixed it up to suit myself. It ain't what you'd call exactly pretty, but as I'm the only one to be pleased I guess it's all right."
"Almost a curiosity shop," she commented, surveying the room with a good deal of nervousness.
"Yes, stuff I've collected from time to time while I was at sea. Got about everything I ever wanted to keep, from the wheel of my first schooner down to spears from water and fresh provisions a little Japanese girl called on me, and I had a terrible time. I wanted to see things right nice and pleasant for her, but, Lord, she couldn't talk a word of English. There she sat all the evening, grinning and making signs while I was talking my head off trying to tell her how much I loved her. All my pretty speeches were boy. Perhaps I should have asked at the office," she said.

"Not at all," he answered, in a manly, intended to be reassuring. "I have my own way in this place. I got the money to pay for what I want, and there ain't no one in this hotel who can stop me 'if and 'out'."
"No one knew me. I didn't care that they should hear my name."
"It's nobody's business. What you long to pay the money to one else can interfere with the way I run my shop."
"Still, a woman at this hour?"
"Makes no difference, although you are the first lady to call on me, night or day."

"You mean that no woman has ever been in here before?"
"I said the first lady," Mrs. Brooks shuddered, and instinctively she glanced toward the door.
"You have a telephone here, haven't you, captain?" she asked.
"Right over there by the door," he said, pointing to it. "Want to use it?"
She cleared her choking throat and started right in to the business that had brought her.

"Captain Williams, since you left us tonight Joe—Mr. Brooks—has told me about his difficulty."
"So Smith said."
"That's what I came to talk about."
"Well, that little matter can rest," he said affably. "You've called, and it's the first chance I've had to speak to you alone."
"I want to know if there is any way—some arrangement—"
"No use in looking so glum over a little stolen money. I want to show you my quarters."
"I didn't come to see your quarters, captain. I came to—"
"I don't care what you came for, Mrs. Brooks," he declared, with nascent playfulness. "I make it a rule that everybody who drops in here, man or woman, has got to listen to the spinning yarns. Now—"
Emma was becoming more and more nervous.

"I know you will think me rude, but I can't delay," she insisted. "Joe is in great trouble, and some other time I'll hear the yarns."
"My God!" she groaned. "What shall I do?"
He rose with mock dignity.

"You're on my ship, Mrs. Brooks. Please remember every captain is master of his ship, and if you don't listen and like it—mind you, I say like it—I'll clap you in double irons for mutiny."
"Captain Williams," she pleaded, "I am sure that you would not displease me."
"This little fore and after, Mrs. Brooks," he broke in, picking up the model of the ship on the mantel, "is a model of the Sally Moran, my first command out of Frisco. That's her wheel up over the door. She laid the cornerstone of my fortune, but she taught me how to fight and have nerve. Took her up into the North Pacific sealing and then down on the Japanese coast. Had a crew who wouldn't adorn any high back rover Captain Kidd ever could wish for. If there was any good in that schooner God must 'a' seen it first and hit it."

To humor him she had advanced to the mantel.
"And is that where you got your awful reputation?" she inquired.
The bushy eyebrows came down until the lids were hidden, and his eyes, shining like live coals, were alone visible as he directed his gaze upon her.
"Just how bad is that 'awful reputation,' Mrs. Brooks?"
"They say," she returned, meeting his gaze steadily, "that you have no heart, no pity, in you; that you'd kill a man in those days with as little feeling as I would kill a mosquito."
"Well, I guess the reason you ain't a mosquito isn't because it's just a mosquito and that you'd like to kill it, but because you're afraid it will bite you. Ain't it?"
"Yes."
"I had men, Mrs. Brooks, who, if you let 'em go too far, they'd bite, and if you let 'em live too deep they'd kill. There were the early days of sealers. It was a hard life, and it made hard men. I ain't any better, but I guess I ain't no worse, than lots of others would be fixed just as I was at that time."
"I'm glad to hear you say that, captain," she declared, seizing the opportunity. "It opens the way for the business I came on."
"Business?"
"Yes, business."
"That's after business hours, Mrs. Brooks, and I ain't half span my yarn. Now, over here I want to show you a couple of spears I got from a lot of Indians down in the Malay archipelago. You may not know where that is, but I've always had an idea it's where God fattened down the devil when he first saw they had you in their hands in the Bible. I was going ashore, seeing what was doing, when this crew of niggers come down on us in a squall. We had an awful time getting back to the boats, I tell you. We were some cut up, and all I got out of the expedition was one of the big chiefs' wives."
He looked into Mrs. Brooks' eyes.
"Took her back to Frisco with me," he added. "Women were scarce in them times—good looking ones."
"You took her away from where she belonged?" questioned Emma slowly and incredulously.
"She was willing to go. No one ever beat her about the ship, and she lived pretty much as she wanted—three meals a day and no hard work."
"What became of her?"
"Died—I guess from overeating. You see them two little anchors that chair's made off?"
But she had recoiled from him, shuddering with horror and aversion.
"She died from overeating?" she interrogated. "Have there been many of those?"
"No; I learned a lesson. I put the rest on a diet."
"She was willing to go. That was particularly clever and humorous, for he burst into a loud guffaw.
Emma did not laugh. She was more disgusted and apprehensive than ever. The clock struck 11.
"Did you hear that?" she said. "I must insist that you let me talk over what I came here for."
"Eleven. It ain't late," he replied coaxingly. "Would you like a little something to drink? It's hot tonight."
"No, I thank you."
"You can have it just as well as not."
"I don't care for it."
"All right, only I thought I might get it for you. You see, when I heard you were coming here I sent my Jap away."
"Why?"
"What he don't know won't hurt him."
"Is there anything, captain, you're afraid he'll find out?" she demanded frigidly.
"Sit down—there, opposite me. I was only thinking of you."
"Joe has stolen some money from you."
"Too bad! Too bad!"
"How much is it?"
"What do you want to know for?"
"It's his wife. It's my business to know."
"Then you go, talking business again!" he protested, trying to be gallant and throwing an oblique glance at her. "I so seldom have the pleasure of your company, Mrs. Brooks, that this 'business' thing knocks all the romance out of your visit."
"I didn't intend there should be any romance in it, Captain Williams," she retorted stiffly.
"Mrs. Brooks," he went on, ignoring the snub, "a sailorman always finds romance in an evening spent with a pretty woman. I can remember well the Sally Moran put into Nagasaki for water and fresh provisions a little Japanese girl called on me, and I had a terrible time. I wanted to see things right nice and pleasant for her, but, Lord, she couldn't talk a word of English. There she sat all the evening, grinning and making signs while I was talking my head off trying to tell her how much I loved her. All my pretty speeches were reel you that I did not come here to make a social call. I never came to a place like this, at a time like this, to talk to a man like you before in my life."

CHAPTER XV.
CAPTAIN WILLIAMS' lower lip advanced, and his pig-like eyes contracted. He threw off his too amiable demeanor. His voice became harsh and cruel as his natural brutality asserted itself.
"That's pretty hard language, Mrs. Brooks."
"Please forgive me and let me talk."
"If you didn't come here to see me sort of socially, what did you come for?"
"About Joe—my husband."
"What about him?"
"I asked you the amount of the defalcation."
"You said it was your business. Well, it's more than $10,000."
Emma was astounded, and her heart beat so fast that every breath she took could be so large a sum.
"Is that the truth?" she asked.
"I ain't never been noted for lying," Captain Williams, I've come here to plead with you to save Joe and me and my family from disgrace—to keep him out of jail. You know my father. You were the early days of sealers, always lived him and knew he was an honest man."
"He was square in his business dealings with me, Mrs. Brooks, and I'm not less than every man in the lot to be who deals with me."
"I know that," she said, her manner becoming supplicating. "I know that, but you must have some respect for my memory, you must have had some affection for him at the time—everybody had—and some pity for me in this trouble. I thought all these things might soften you, might open a way to some arrangement that would save us from the exposure that seems to be bound to come tomorrow morning. Isn't there some way out of it?"
But he was all business now. He had satisfied himself that he had won his point with her.
"Have you got the money?" he snapped.
"Then what's your proposition?"
"I have none," she confessed hopelessly, hanging her head.
"Tough!" he grunted, settling himself in his chair.
"I thought—I thought you might be a little more charitable and suggest some way," she murmured.
"Your husband sent you here, didn't he?"
"Yes."
"Was it to say to you?"
"Told me I might have some influence with you."
"Put the blame on you for stealing the money, didn't he?"
"How did you know that?"
She raised her head and looked at him in surprise.
"I know the man. Didn't he?"
"Yes."
"Told you, didn't he, that you could fix it up with me to call everything off?"
"Yes, that's what he said," she admitted wondrously.
"And I suppose he said that if you didn't, you'd have to take the blame for him going to the penitentiary?"
"It—it was something like that."
"That he thought I liked you pretty well?"
"Yes," she stammered, now utterly bewildered.
"I think that was part of what he said."
"Didn't forget that, eh? Well," he continued, looking once more straight into her eyes and putting the blame squarely to her. "I'm here and you're here. That part seems all right. What have you got to say?"
She sustained his gaze bravely and answered, though with no hope in her heart:
"Is there any honorable way in which I can help him?"
"What do you mean by 'honorable'?" Emma lost all patience. Her nerves that had been under such severe strain, were getting beyond control. She rose, flinging angrily.
"You mean what I mean by 'honorable'?" she asked. "You know what any good woman means when she says 'honorable.' You're beating about the bush, Captain Williams. If you want to come to the point, come to it and come to it quickly. I am going home."
"Now you're talking, my lass," he said grimly, getting up also, "and I'll talk right back to you. If I took your opinion of me and that of your thieving husband I wouldn't have to talk. I'd tell you in plain words that if you wanted to go to San Francisco with me I'd take a chance on the overboard and wouldn't put you on a diet like I put the rest. What would you do then? What if I did make the proposition that in your mind and was in the mind of that sneaking husband of yours when he tried to put you on the bargain counter and send you over to me to see if I'd put the price up to sixteen thousand? What if I looked you over and was pleased and thought you cheap at that figure? You say I've killed men. Yes, I have—wrung their heads off with this hand like you'd sling a chicken in the air. You came here for a purpose. You ain't no chicken. What if I am the beast and the brute you say I am? What'll you do to me? I said you were the first lady to come In here. Maybe I made a mistake, but if I did I'll find it out before you leave this room, you understand? I've talked, now you talk."

Her reply came with withering scorn:
"Now I know that you're everything people say you are."

Stops Neuralgia Pains

The shooting, tearing pains of neuralgia are caused by excitement of the nerves. Sciatica is also a nerve pain.
Sloan's Liniment, a soothing external application, stops neuralgia pains at once, quiets the nerves, relieves that feeling of numbness which is often a warning of paralysis, and by its tonic effect on the nervous and muscular tissues, gives permanent as well as immediate relief.

One Application Relieved the Pain.
"Mr. J. C. Lee, of 1100 Ninth St., S. E., Washington, D. C., writes:—
"I advised a lady who was a great sufferer from neuralgia to try Sloan's Liniment. After one application the pain left her and she has not been troubled with it since."

"All right," he said, making a step toward her. "If I am what everybody says I am—what you think I am—you know what to expect, and I don't need to talk."

The peril of his situation seemed to him to be desperate, and with it came the courage, the determination, the faith, the courage that impels a man to do what he knows there is no escape to turn and fight for his life.

"You think I'm afraid of you?" she cried, throwing up her head and clashing the lands at her sides. "I tell you I'm not. We've been too long at cross purposes. What you want me to do I know; what my husband sent me for I know. You can be the best and the worst that you are; he can be the contemptible cur that he is. He can offer me for sale, and you can still stand ready to buy me. But I've got something to say about it, and I desire you to know that if I wanted to place myself on the market, as you say, I couldn't! You disgust me, but I shan't shrink, and I am not afraid of you or of him or of any one. Here!"

She turned quickly, locked the door, threw the key at his feet and confronted him unflinchingly again. "There's the key to your room. The door is locked, and I am alone with you. You kill men? You wring their necks? Well, Captain Williams, here's your first chance to kill a woman, for that's just exactly what you'll have to do."

She saw the glare in the little savage optics under the beetling brows face out, to be replaced by a gleam of admiration, not the covetous admiration of her shapely, panting form, of her handsome, resolute face, but honest admiration of the pure soul that shone in her eyes.

"I knew you were that kind of a woman," he said, thankfulness and real tenderness in his voice. "If you hadn't done just what you did I'd have been the most disappointed man in the world."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," he continued, almost reverently, "that I looked on you being good, and you are good. I know women. I've bought mine all over the world, from Hindoos to niggers. But I paid for 'em, and they were always willing to sell. There ain't but two kinds, the good and the bad, and there's no halfway. When they're bad they're bad through and through and can't be good, and when they're good they can't be bad, and they're next to heaven. I figured you good, and if you hadn't been it would have hit me, and hit me hard. You're safer here, young woman, than with your mother, because I'd fight for you, and I don't forget I can wring men's necks like chickens."

Emma could not comprehend it.

"I don't understand you," she faltered.

"Maybe you mean you don't believe me," he said, going to the table and taking the paper he had written upon

"You came here for a purpose. You ain't no child."

and then slipped between the pages of one of the magazines. "Here, I've had this waiting for you. Read it."

She made no motion to take it from his hand.

"Well, I'll read it for you," he said.

"It's addressed to that husband of yours."

"Your resignation is accepted. I wish to thank you for your services and to assure you that your accounts with the Latin-American Steamship company have been audited and found to be correct."

Electric Bitters

Succeed with everything else fails. In nervous prostration and female weakness they tell the true story. The remedy, as thousands have testified.

FOR KIDNEY, LIVER AND STOMACH TROUBLE

is the best medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust settles, or settling string or silk appearance often indicates a healthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney medicine, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is health restoring. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need such medicine you should have the best. Sold by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, N. Y., on every bottle.

"Now, Mrs. Brooks, if you'd acted in any way but what you did you would not have got this, but I knew you were good, and you are good."

He added with deep feeling, holding out the paper to her again:

"It's worth that much to me and a lot more to have a good woman for a wife. I added with deep feeling, holding out the paper to her again:

"Thank you, Captain Williams," she said.

The words came in a whisper, almost inaudibly.

She tried to read the writing, but tears in her eyes blurred the lines.

"You know, Mrs. Brooks," said Williams in a light tone and his usual voice, seating himself in his chair and waving away from her, "before we got to discussing this business I was telling you about the Sally Moran, my first ship. Now, that ship—learn me say ship?—was only a schooner."

She walked up to him and interrupted him, smiling gratefully through her tears.

"What can I do now, captain?" she asked.

The telephone bell rang as she spoke.

"You might answer the phone," he told her, "I'm getting almighty lazy."

She did not.

"It's Jimsey—Mr. Smith," she announced.

"I kind o' thought that fellow 'd be nosing around instead of going to Boston tomorrow," he soliloquized. "What's the trouble?"

"He's downstairs and wants to know if he can come up."

"Sure he can."

"Yes, come up, Jimsey," she called.

The captain stroked his face thoughtfully.

"When you let him in you sort o' smile and look into his face," he said.

"He's a kind of an old baby, Smith, and it does him a lot of good."

"I always smile at Jimsey," she replied.

"No one could help that, could they?"

"He is an amusing cuss," he concluded.

He reached for the tin of tobacco.

"You don't mind if I smoke, do you?"

"You wait for me a moment, Jimsey. I want to speak to the captain," she said.

"All right," he responded, going outside to ring up the elevator.

"Captain, this paper—shall I give it to him?" she inquired.

"Who—Brooks?"

"I would. It clears you."

"And you? How can I thank you?"

"Don't mind me. Only some time when you get settled down and are living happy again invite me up to tea. Let me put on my slippers and smoke my pipe in the parlor."

"Indeed I will. Good night."

"And, Emma," he added ere she had reached the door, "I suppose I can call you Emma now, can't I?"

"Pay a lot of attention to that fellow Smith. He's an awful good friend of yours."

"I've found that out tonight," she answered. "Good night."

"Good night, Emma."

When she had gone the old man sat for some time smoking his pipe meditatively. Finally he kicked off his slippers, rose, stretched himself, sat down again, smiled and uttered his thoughts aloud.

"Well, Captain Bill," he told himself, "I guess you've paid up a part of that deficit you've owed decency for such a long time."

RIBBON FILLETS.

In All Gowns to Suit Time, Place and the Girl.

With the classic cultures so much in vogue any number of modifications of the fillet idea have appeared to tempt mildly to adorn her tresses. Where the young girl of a season or so ago coolly bound her locks of an evening with a simple band of ribbon or velvet, tied in place every time it was put on by her own more or less skilled fingers, now the girl and the woman of every age slip into mine by day as well as at night some fetching little contrivance of any degree of elaborateness to suit the occasion with no more trouble than the adjusting of a belt and sure of the artistic result.

In the accompanying cut are shown a few of the most attractive of the new hair ornaments. Most of them as may be seen, are fillets of ribbon twisted around a wire foundation curved to fit the head and bent in at the ends just enough to insure the ornament's staying in place without any comfortable pinning. The rose is a perennial favorite for hair decoration, whether natural or artificial, and it is no surprise to find this used more than any other flower, attached to each end of the fillet.

NEW HAIR ORNAMENTS.

A pretty variation, however, is seen in one of the groups. Here, attached with one end of a band of twisted ribbon in a soft wood grain, is a cluster of natural looking cherries. A few green leaves and two tiny loops of cherry colored velvet are fastened in with the stems of the fruit. Another dainty idea is the half wreath of flowers, illustrated by the daisies, intertwined with foliage and pale green ribbon.

This also is slung on a wire foundation, but its irregularity of outline makes the fact less obvious than the others.

In some cases the connecting ribbon is dispensed with entirely, as in the two lower ornaments. Here gold or silver wire may be substituted for the ordinary kind and either braided, as in the one with the single flower, where the wire is to be worn in and out through the hair, or laid in wavy strands of graduated length, as in the simple little pretty fillet.

Pearls and brilliants will never be quite cast aside for hair adornment, and several charming arrangements for hairpin and headband are shown in the upper portion of the group near the head.

Frightful Fate Averted.

"I would have been a dipple for life, from a terrible cut on my knee cap," writes Frank Haskery, Kellner, Minn., "without Bucklen's Arnica ointment, which cured me." Infallible for wounds, cuts and bruises, it soon cures Burns, Scalds, Old Sores, Boils, Skin Eruptions, World's best for Piles. 25c at Severs Drug Store.

Thought He Was Mad.

The late Count de Lesseps was traveling on one occasion in a French railway train in a compartment with two commercial travelers.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said one of them, fancying that he belonged to their fraternity—"are you not a traveler?"

"Certainly I am," said the count. "We thought so! What is your line?"

"Whichever," asked the puzzled commercial—"what are they?"

"I am introducing ship canals," said De Lesseps gravely.

The commercial travelers feared that he had fallen in with a lunatic and were making preparations to escape when the count handed them his card and put them at their ease.

Kills Her Foe Of 20 Years.

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything. I am 70 years old and an overjoyed to get my health and strength back again." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Kidney Trouble, Lame Back, Female Complaints, its unequalled. Only 50c at Severs drug store.

New Method of Road Maintenance.

The road commissioners of a county in Georgia are considering a new plan for maintaining the highways.

The idea is to organize a gang of road workers, to be composed of free labor, that can be sent anywhere in the county on short notice and without the expense of guards, as in the case of convicts. Superintended kindly with supplied with an automobile so that they can traverse the 555 miles of roads in the county and plan out the work in advance.

Experiment In Des Moines, Ia.

Des Moines, Ia., is to build a mile of experimental roadway to determine the best method of construction. One section will be of concrete, another of flag covered with broken stone, etc.

Can't look well, eat well or feel well with impure blood feeding your body. Keep the blood pure with Burdock Blood Bitters. Eat simply, take exercise, keep clean and you will have long life.

Cumulative Value of Good Highways.

Improved roads are breeders of trade. Commerce invariably follows the line of the least resistance, and rarely is a good road constructed that much travel is not diverted to it from other courses. In addition to this, it may almost invariably be found that new industries, new and greater productions, spring up along the well built roads. With the added commerce comes added enlightenment, added sociability, enlarged business and more and more developed and perfected citizenship.

Young Girls Are Victims

of headache, as well as older women, but all get quick relief and prompt cure from Dr. King's New Life Pills, the world's best remedy for sick and nervous headaches. They make pure blood, and strong nerves and build up your health. Try them. 25c. at Severs drug store.

PRIZES FOR GOOD ROADS.

New Scheme In Maryland, Mo., to Encourage Building Five Mile Sections.

Maryville, Mo., will attempt to solve the good roads proposition in a new way. At a recent meeting of the Maryville Commercial club it was decided to formulate a plan to give four prizes aggregating $750 for the four best five mile stretches of road leading into Maryville.

No matter how far out the five mile section may be, just so it is connected to a complete five mile section which touches the city limits or to a section which touches such contiguous section it will be eligible for prizes. The sections thus competing must be kept in order for one year.
